the incendiary, or the murderer to the perpetration of his infernal purposes. To effice these deep and dark impressions has been the work of many a good man's life—indeed an firmly imprinted are they in our nature, that they never can be totally tenued.

To these impressions, may be attributed all that diversite of character which we shilly see among men. To this source, may be traced all those prominent motives, which influence even through life. How often do we see the youth, blooming in all the innocence that characterizes that season of life, at first insensibly seduced from the paths of sirties, and gradually follows are the paths of sirties, and gradually follows are the child rejoining in all the vivacity of couth, whose heart is uncontaminated by the folles of the world, impreceptibly devicting from the path of recitivities, much at last he finds himself ingriphed in the soul destroying rorter of dissipation—feeling himself from the path of recitivities, much at last he boundary of virtue, until he has resolved the extremity of virtue, until he has resolved the extremity of virtue, until he has resolved the extremity of virtue, which are con-principles, than those of magnanimity and bonor—who seem to sit elevated far above at that illiberality, that spirit of meannes, which an nominarally characterizes the life of some, the congress of the mind, and suppress the glowing arduer that is eakindled in the harmon breast, and untainted by the final breath of dishonor, which withers and deadens all the kindlier feelings of our nature—their sphere of happiness is vastly expanded beyond that of those around them. Trace these characteristics of life through all their various windings to the first cause, and we shall find that they proceeded from the early impressions of childhood, from the inculestion of those principles upon his mind in youth of which he now derives the happiness effects.

There are others whose only sim seems to be to strike a deadly blow at human happiness whose hearts are black with crime, where vice has concentrated all its suckening forces, and brought them up in dread array against the happiness of man.

The cause of so total a difference between these two characters can be accounted for in no other satisfactory way, than by ascribing it to their different education—In the one, were carefully enhuvated all the noble feelings of humanity, all the mild affections made to flourish with an unevertained luxuriance, and all humanity, all the mild affections made to flou-rish with an unrestrained luxuriance, and all the warm enotions of the soul to glow with an unextinguished ardour. In the other, vice swayed its sceptre with an mulisputed sway, and stamped its deadly image on the heart. SECUNDUS.

The following paragraph in relation to a pirate named John Thomas, or Tomies, who was under sentence of death in Charleston, but was paraloned by the Governor of South Carolina, on condition of his being removed by the Spanish Consul from the United States, never to return, is copied from the United States, never to return, is copied from the United States, never to return, is copied from the United States, never to return, is copied from the United States, never to return, is copied from the United States, never to return, is copied from the 25th Aug. in the schr. Caduceus, for Matanzas, in charge of Mr. Morris Goldsmith, the accredited spent of the Consul, and we are informed that on the passage he attempted to excite a mutiny on board the schooner; but the decisive conduct of Capt. Heartte pravented any evil consequences from his villainous tricks. Mr. Goldsmith also had a very narrow escape, as the of Capt. Hearite prayented any evil consequences from his villainous tricks. Mr. Goldanith also had a very narrow escape, as the raseal made an attempt to throw him overboard. And, as the consummation of his observed, he had no sooner landed at Matanzaa, than he assaulted one of the inhabitants, stabing him three times with a knife, which it was feared would prove fatal. He was soon after arrested, and committed for trial. He is said to have expressed it as his determination, should he be equally fortunate to escape the gallows in Matanzas, which heaven forbid, a become a pirate, and in this character glut his revenge on all Americans who should be so unhappy as to fall in his way. What champts is there in extending mercy to such a monster!

The following is an account of the new steam-boat, Intely put in successful operation at Newport, R. I.

The boat in which Mr. Babcook's engine is placed, was built by Stephen T. Northam, Esq. is 52 keel, 134 feet beam, and measures 62 tons. The steam is generated in 14 tubes, of 5 inches diameter, and connected by caps at the ends, placed in a furnace 8 feet long and 34 wide. The steam from the lower ow of generators, raises the niston. the long and 34 wide. The steam from the lower row of generators, raises the nistan, that was the upper littres it down. After the paston has risen to its proper height, the steam escapes into the condensing tube, and is again conveyed to the reservoir of water. The stroke of the piston rud is 34 feet; the cylinder is ten inches in diameter. The water is forced into the generators by pumps connected with the engine, four square inches being injected at every stroke. In going to and returning from Providence, but ten gallons of water were wasted. The distance is 30 miles, which was performed in 44 hours up, with the wind shead, and 4 down. The quantity of wood consumed in both possages was 4 feet. The answer the wind ahead, and a down. The quanto of wood consumed in both passages was feet. The engine was new, and the carting rough: in several trials since, the velocity ha been greatly increased.

Had Miss Murray been the printer of newspaper, and experienced a portion of the whims and caprices to which that class or nortals are heir to, she would have found a bundant supply of materials for a score o essays on "human nature," and in each our have escaped the critical spleen and waspish ness of even the satirical Buckingham. Such crookedness of intellect as is exhibited among some, such amiable and generous qualitie among others, and such singular versatility of character among all the honoured patron of a newspaper, would afford food for the mind of a hermit, or a dancing master, impart in struction to the wise, amusement to the thoughtless, and supply a philosopher's desk with more theories than could be unravelled in a century, or an author's brain with more of the raw material than it were possible t spin out in an age, though blest with all the namfold powers of the " great unknown."-We have not time to enumerate the one twen tieth portion of the heads, and much less to set down the details of the one-thousandth part of the subject matter, with which we are ontinually presented; but for a single itemthat of collecting-could we convey the mo distant idea of the beauties and blessings of brig Spark, to his friend in Washington City, that delightful science—we should be certain dated Matanzas. 15th Sept. 1825, asys, "we have just returned from a cruise among those of enchaining and enchanting the spirit of admiretion, to be sold on presenting a bill for the twentieth time, that " the master of the house was at prayers, and therefore could not be acco. Her captain had his Protection from the Governor General of Cuba. We have met with many such accoundrels, but we cannot find any pretext for capture. The salutary chastisement they have met with, and the indefaitigable manner in which we now cruise, prevent any open acts of piracy. We have been constantly in motion since we have been out, having made case for deferring the payment of a trifle, just I amount of the civil of the ci acis of piracy. We have been constantly in motion since we have been out, having made the circuit of the whole Island, north and south, without having heard of any act of piracy. We are now painting and making ready for the reception of our charge d'Affairs to Guatimala, Mr. Miller, whom we are directed to carry to his place of destination—
The Terrier has been despatched to Thompson's Island for him, and as soon as she returns, we shall proceed. We reached here on the 13th inst. Our officers and crew are all in perfect health, though we have not been without some sickness, having hall, at one time, as many as twenty-five officers and mendown with the fever, at Trinidad. We lost 4 human nature! human materes how just and enviable when it shows itself in a garb so acceptable to the company, or nopping it, was a sufficient ex-cuse for deferring the payment of a trifle, just and honestly due. But now turn the picture—

Aht human nature! human nature! human nature how just and enviable when it shows itself in a garb so acceptable to the printer. Thanks, generous patron, the smile of approbation that plays upon those lips, (they are a female's of course,) more than compensate for all our losses and crosses, and in return we cannot but mention an instance where human nature displayed itself in all its deformity, in the person of one of your rich neighbours, and which we give yougs a fact, in itself apeaking volumes. A subscriber to this paper, in moderate circumstances, had ment of the breed of Horses," within a week or two past, have had their autual races over the Union Course on Long Island, followed up as usual with a dinner, &c. They boast of he beneficial effects arising from their exer-ions, which it is said are already beginning to show themselves, in the growth of a stock of horses "which can bid defiance to the United States," and congratulate themselves on having so successfully contended against the prejudices of their opposeuts, &c.

It would be a poor concern, indeed, if some good did not result from it—the good, how ever, is comparatively small, and that conwithin narrow limits. It requires but little at tention to the nature of a race ground, that prolific source of mischief and vice, to make i quite apparent, that the evil far out-balance he good; nor does it require even an inspe tion of the ground itself to confirm this belief. The mouth-pieces and organs of the "Society" sufficiently declare the degrading ter mey of those sports of the turf; for it canno be otherwise, when, as their toasts and sent ments on the occasions clearly prove, the the same level, and associate the chi of each in scutiments as derogatory and indecorous as they are disgusting. Nor are the injurious tendencies of these " jockey clubs" confined here—they engender political and Those toasts particularly which drunk at the above dinner, are forcible indi cations of this. The companies on these occa-sions are known to comist in part, of gentle hear, and not feel, the sarcasms which are so illiberally thrown out against the submissive the conquered, the yielding "south," is not very probable, they are high spirited, and though a sense of forbearance and polite-ness due the company, may induce them to pass over such unjust allusions for the time, they are not forgotten. From such seen may be carried feelings, which, cherished by wounded pride and communicated to othe materials, of which there are always too grea an abundance, might be productive of more evil than all the "jockey clubs" that ever existed have done, or ever will do good.
